Sept 2012 - Present: VocalEyes

VocalEyes is a digital democracy platform. I work remotely within a small team of developers, and my tasks include front-end development with HTML, CSS, jQuery, ReactJS and Adobe Experience Design.

All correspondence is made over Slack and Skype, as well as monthly meetings in person with the director of VocalEyes.

Nov 2014 - Present: Freelance

As a freelance developer I have worked remotely with a telecommunications event organiser in Berlin, a large yoga company in London, as well as numerous other clients on both front and backend projects.

I also worked in-house with a Swansea based agency for 6 months, as part of a small team of five developers, mainly updating the websites of their existing client base to responsive designs. This involved face-to-face meetings and project reviews, as well as correspondence via phone and Skype.

Nov 2015 - Oct 2016: Solar Plants

I was one of 85+ employees working within the marketing department, and was an integral part of weekly marketing meetings with the company directors, sales managers and compliance officer.

My main responsibilities were creating wireframes for targeted landing pages and building them using HTML, CSS and jQuery, as well as analysing traffic in Google Analytics.

Sept 2012 - Nov 2014: Shire Web Dev

I built websites using WordPress, HTML and CSS. I was also responsible for the development of all projects, managing quotations, invoices and all relevant documentation as well as liaising with clients via phone, email and in person.

😊 Profile.

I am a highly creative and motivated web developer with 5 years commercial experience. I am entirely self-taught, which displays my ability to take on any new challenges and to constantly adapt in such a dynamic and evolving industry.

I am very detail-oriented, which is essential in this line of work; I am superb at understanding a brief, communicating my ideas, and delivering standout results on time and in budget.

I thrive working both independently and as part of a team of any size.
